The Department of Speech, Language, and Hearing Sciences (SLHS) at the University of Florida is seeking applications for two faculty positions at any rank. These positions can be tenure-accruing or non-tenure accruing, depending on the qualifications of the applicant. Applicants must have a Ph.D. in audiology, hearing sciences, or a closely-related field. Successful candidates will have clearly defined expertise in a relevant research area and a record of publications in peer-reviewed journals. Successful applicants at the Associate or Full Professor level will have a strong track record of external grant funding. Duties include research in the area of expertise, pursuit of external funding, teaching and mentoring of students, and service to the department. These are full-time (1.00 FTE), 12-month positions, expected to start in 2018 or early 2019.

Come join our team at one of the nation’s top university teaching hospitals and health care facilities located in beautiful North Central Florida. SLHS is housed within the College of Public Health and Health Professions and is well integrated within the Health Science Center, providing a wealth of opportunities for scholarly collaborations. We are a large department with more than 15 academic faculty members addressing a multi-faceted mission that encompasses education, service, and research. We just obtained academic accreditation that continues for eight years. The Health Science Center is one of the largest in the nation, with six separate colleges.

The University of Florida is a comprehensive doctoral research-extensive university that includes a full range of academic departments and programs (www.ufl.edu). It has a long history of established programs in international education, research and service and is one of only 17 public, land-grant universities that belong to the Association of American Universities. UF is the state’s oldest and most comprehensive university and is among the nation’s most academically diverse public higher education institutions. It regularly has more than $700 million in research dollars.

The city of Gainesville is affordable and family friendly, offering a variety of opportunities for entertainment and outdoor activities.
